

Specialty Resources Announces Updated Website

Specialty Resources, Inc. (SRI), a leader in inventory management and global sourcing, is pleased to announce the release of their updated website at www.srifast.com. Visitors are now able to view the website with greater speed and efficiency. The new site offers areas that will enable the customer or supplier to ask questions, request information, and request a quote. The links page provides useful links to associations and databases for information regarding material properties. Trade shows and special events are also spotlighted.

"H&M Innovate did a great job at redesigning the web portal into Specialty Resources' own marketplace," said Randy Procopio, President of SRI. "Websites are such a necessity in today's marketplace and they constantly have to be updated to keep up with technology."

Headquartered in Chester Springs, Pennsylvania, SRI has the ability to source most blueprint items domestically and globally. SRI has 24 years of experience sourcing overseas and has many qualified suppliers in all areas of manufacturing. They are very competitive on castings, forgings, bearings, fasteners, stampings, specialized machined parts, as well as many different types of rubber and plastic products. A big part of SRI is also automotive aftermarket products. They will be exhibiting at the AAPEX Show in Las Vegas for the first time this year.

Since the opening of their new building in January 2007, the kitting and packaging departments have grown and are now able to handle any request customers may have. The assembly department has grown as well to allow for more secondary operations to be performed in house. All of these improvements have had a great impact on the customer service and cost effectiveness that SRI is well known for.

SRI invites you to stop by their booth #1350 at the National Industrial Fastener Show West to learn about all of the value added services that you should expect from a world class supplier.
